The Motion D-pad technology allows players to use the D-pad to control players from the ground, through specific aerials or whilst locked onto the ball. FIFA 20 players will be familiar with the new Pro Controller feature with an additional left analogue stick, giving players even more control over attacking and defensive gameplay. The game introduces numerous new gameplay features for all playing modes, such as the first-person view, which will allow players to take a more strategic perspective of the match. Players can now send fast paced tap attacks and take advantage of the strength of attacks. With the ability to feint opponents, players can direct the pace of the game as they score, turn and pass the ball. The new Approach control and the new dynamic Control Innovations work together to create a more nuanced game. New Ajax controls provide a range of options for players to choose from, including sliding, dithering, high/low kicks and the ability to slide the ball from one player to another. Players can also change the distance of an aerial pass on the fly, letting players build attacks quickly. The Foul Shot Control reduces the number of interactions that players have to make in order to send in a free kick. When a penalty is awarded, for example, players can flick the ball, release a short shot or let the ball fly. The new Dynamic Crosses system, implemented in a variety of ways based on the player's position, will make the game more versatile as players try to unlock combinations that unlock advantages during matches. Pace of Play has also been improved on both sides of the pitch. Players will receive a greater number of fitness and fatigue scores to enable players to take full advantage of gameplay conditions. Players can now send more precise and faster passes to keep their team in control and score more goals. On both sides, defenders will be able to intercept more passes, which will create more opportunities for the attacking team. Squad Building and Player Development has also been improved with an update to the team chemistry. Players can now share information with each other in pre-match discussions or post-match celebrations. As their popularity rises, players will receive invitations to appear on the FIFA 20 Soundtrack, with long-serving FIFA 20 composer David August Burns taking the reins. This stunningly beautiful, high definition version of the next-gen master-piece, FIFA 20, is an absolute must-have for FIFA Ultimate Team (FUT) players. Sporting new
